EMERGENCY RULE TITLE: Miscellaneous Permits and License

1. Date of Filing November 4, 1994
2. Statutory authority for promulgating emergency rule:
20-1-7 (20) and 20-1-7 (30)
3. Date of filing of proposed legislative rule: November 4, 1994
4. Does the emergency rule adopt new language or does it amend or appeal a current legislative rule?
Adopts new language.
5. Has the same or similar emergency rule previously been filed?
No
6. State, with particularity, those facts and circumstances which make the emergency rule necessary from the immediate preservation of public peace, health, safety or welfare. Passage of Senate Bill 337 by the 1994 Legislature adds live foxes and raccoons taken during the established trapping season to wildlife items that can be sold. Prior to the legislation, only the pelts of these animals could be sold. Without the proposed emergency rule the welfare of these animals is not assured through any established regulations and the potential for commingling and transmission of disease, especially through contact with wild foxes, raccoons and game farm animals is great. The proposed emergency rule separates the current licenses to operate a private game preserve into three categories to govern the use, care and disposition of live foxes and raccoons now available for commercial sale as a result of Senate Bill 337. The 1994-95 trapping season for foxes and raccoon opens November 5, 1994 and closes January 31, 1995.
7. If the emergency rule was promulgated in order to comply with a time limit established by the Code or federal statute or regulation, cite the Code provision, federal statute or regulation and time limit established therein.
No

8. State, with particularity, those facts and circumstances which make the emergency rule necessary to prevent substantial harm to the public interest.

The uncontrolled possession, transfer, translocation, holding and release of wild trapped foxes and raccoons will increase exposure of human and domestic livestock to rabies, parvovirus, distemper and other highly contagious diseases. In addition, the uncontrolled sale of these animals will increase the geographic dislocation of rabies in nature.
