Early Learning Standards Framework

Children, regardless of where they spend their preschool years, benefit from an enriched environment that supports maximum development and optimizes learning opportunities. In March 2002, the West Virginia legislature passed Senate Bill 247 that became West Virginia Code §18-5-44, a mandate for high quality early education programs for all four-year-old children and three year old children with identified special needs. These early education programs are now known as West Virginia Pre-kindergarten (WV Pre-k). To support the provision of enriched environments for young children, a collaborative group of West Virginia early education professionals developed the Early Learning Standards Framework, a document that is developmentally appropriate and based on what preschool children should know and learn. The standards are designed to serve as early learning guidelines for all children ages three through five regardless of the setting.

The Early Learning Standards Framework is intended to guide practitioners in offering high quality early education environments that are responsive to individual children and maximize learning and skill development. Using this standards framework, educators can plan high quality learning experiences designed to promote school readiness skills for all children, including children with disabilities. The framework is not designed as an assessment tool, nor should it be used as a way to delay the entry of eligible children into kindergarten.

The Early Learning Standards Framework is considered an integral part of an inter-related comprehensive curriculum and assessment system as defined by WVDE Policy 2525.

Guiding Principles.

The West Virginia Board of Education has the responsibility for establishing high quality standards pertaining to all educational standards in all education programs (W.Va. Code §18-9A-22). The following principles were used in the development Early Learning Standards Framework and are to be considered in its usage.

1. Representation and symbolic thinking is an essential element in providing high quality early education programs. The ability to pretend and use symbols is at the foundation for symbolic and abstract thought leading to the development of academic skills such as math, science, and literacy. Children use representation and symbolic thinking across all domains to develop understanding of concepts and generalizations from concrete to abstract. The experiences that lead to a child's ability to think abstractly are embedded in the curriculum through opportunities for active exploration, pretend play, and symbolic communication.

2. Children are active learners. Children learn through active involvement (exploring, playing, manipulating, and problem-solving). Adults have an essential role in purposefully guiding each child's development across all domains.

3. Development and learning are interrelated. Early learning and areas of development interact and influence each other. The dynamic interaction of all domains of development must be considered. No domain of development should be addressed in isolation. All domains are interrelated and experiences related to the Early Learning Standards Framework should be integrated and offered daily or frequently as noted.

4. Each child is an individual learner. Children go through similar stages of development but at individual rates. All children within an age group should not be expected to arrive at early Learning Criteria at the same time or with the same degree of proficiency.

5. Children with special needs and those who do not speak English develop best in inclusive early education settings. Individualized modifications and adaptations will be designed to provide each child with the opportunities to reach his or her full potential.

6. Family involvement is critical. The family is the child's first and most important teacher and integral to the success of the child as he/she progresses through school.

7. Development and learning are embedded in culture. Early education settings and programs must be purposefully planned to expand the child's awareness and understanding of cultures and people different from themselves.

Definitions

1. Domains: Child development can be organized in broad categories of learning called domains. All domains are interrelated and experiences related to the Early Learning Standards Framework should be integrated and offered daily. The framework is organized in the following domains: Social and Emotional, The Arts, Physical Health and Development, Language and Literacy, Mathematics, Science.

2. Experiences: Activities purposefully provided to foster each child's acquisition of skills and knowledge necessary to reach the Learning Criteria are called experiences. The framework provides examples of experiences that are reflective of effective practices. A state approved list of published curricula will provide comprehensive strategies for supporting the learning criteria.

3. Learning criteria: The skills and knowledge children should develop and acquire within the context of the standard are called learning criteria. The framework has identified learning criteria within each domain and standard. The Learning Criteria were written to support each child's individual rate of development. Progress toward meeting the Learning Criteria will be measured along a developmental continuum within the state adopted early education assessment system.

200302

4. Performance indicator: The performance indicator is a benchmark of development. Children demonstrate their competence in a variety of ways. The framework lists examples of performance indicators for each Learning Criteria that may demonstrate every child's movement along the developmental continuum.

5. Standard: The standard is the category within the domain. The Framework utilizes standards to sub-categorize each domain to delineate the criterion for development.

THE ARTS

Imagination and creativity are the foundation for new ideas. Flexible and creative thinking build skills that are needed for problem solving, conflict resolution, leadership, and life long learning. Acknowledging the bodies of research in brain development, learning styles, and multiple intelligences, children benefit from daily opportunities for individual artistic expression of their ideas. Adults should respect, manage, and support the long term creation of extended projects by providing the opportunity for these projects to be continued. Eliciting the creative spirit of each child enhances the development of the whole child. As children experience opportunities to express themselves through artistic representation, development is enhanced in every domain of learning.

Through music and movement, children hear, discriminate, and respond to the various sounds of language, a skill required for phonological awareness.

Through the visual arts, children begin graphic representation, a precursor to writing. Through dramatic play, stories are created and characters come to life.

PHYSICAL HEALTH AND DEVELOPMENT

Physical health and development is foundational to fostering competence in all domains, including self-concept, reading, writing, scientific exploration and math. Children are active and physical beings who learn through interaction with their environments. As children grow and develop, they become more skillful and expressive in their movement and manipulation. Children should receive support and guidance as they engage in activities that refine their physical abilities. Early in life children can begin to develop knowledge and habits of healthy living.

Children develop at differing rates with a wide variety of abilities. As with all other domains, the physical environment must be adapted to meet the needs of every child.

LANGUAGE AND LITERACY

Early language and literacy development are foundational for communicating, reading, and learning across the domains. Words and the way they are linked together express and relate ideas that provide the lens or filter through which a child perceives, understands, and analyzes their world. Reading, writing and oral language are inter-related and inter-dependent sets of complex skills, attitudes and behaviors. Children's early language and literacy skills emerge within the context of their experience and culture. Language and literacy development are inclusive of all forms of communication for expressing thoughts, feelings, and knowledge.

MATHEMATICS

Mathematics is the ability to think logically, to solve problems and to perceive relationships. Order and logic are found by noticing patterns, making predictions and solving problems. In early childhood, children construct and become aware of mathematical concepts operating in their everyday lives. Mathematical concepts are constructed through concrete experiences that lead to the ability to think abstractly. An understanding of the concept of numbers is fundamental to mathematics.

Mathematics involves:

- numbers and operations;
- patterns and relationships;
- geometry and spatial sense; and
- measurement.

SCIENCE

Science is an organized body of knowledge about the physical and natural world and entails exploration, observation, and experimentation. Early knowledge of concepts such as scientific inquiry and knowledge of the physical, life, and earth sciences is utilized in all areas of development and form a basis for life-long learning. As children identify components of the natural world, observe changes, and describe simple patterns, they develop the skills to organize, predict and problem solve. Children learn that investigations can be a method of learning about their environment, a way to answer questions, and that new discoveries can lead to new understandings about the world around them.

Science involves:

- inquiry; and
- scientific knowledge.

SCIENCE
Standard 1: Science as Inquiry
Learning Criteria: Each child will progress in gaining a foundational knowledge of scientific inquiry.
