The Secretary of State will soon publish all regulations used to implement West Virginia laws as an initial step in complying with the new law which gives a Legislative Committee veto power over administrative rules and regulations.

The West Virginia Department of Agriculture has nearly 600 pages of regulations on file. Some are new, some are old, and as you can well imagine, they have been filed or coded in different ways over the years. In checking through them, the Secretary of State found that "Series 3", as an example, had been assigned to two different regulations in this Department. His staff has rechecked our file, Administrative Regulations, Chapter 19-2, and has assigned new series numbers where necessary to offset duplication.

The attached listing gives the series which will be used in the publication. Would you please let me know if you have questions?
