

SYNOPSIS

2003 AUG 26 P 2:41

COAL SEVERANCE TAXES – OTA'S AUTHORITY TO DECLARE STATUTE UNCONSTITUTIONAL AS APPLIED -- The West Virginia Office of Tax Appeals ("OTA"), as a part of the executive branch of state government, lacks the authority, under W. Va. Const. art. V, § 1, to declare a statute unconstitutional on its face; on the other hand, OTA does have the limited authority to declare a state tax statute unconstitutional as applied to the particular set of material facts involved in a given matter.

COAL SEVERANCE TAXES – STATUTES UNCONSTITUTIONAL AS APPLIED TO FOREIGN EXPORTS -- Governed by the holding of the Supreme Court of the United States in Richfield Oil Corp. v. State Board of Equalization, 329 U.S. 69, 91 L. Ed. 80, 67 S. Ct. 156 (1946) (famously pro-taxpayer-oriented Douglas, J., writing for 7-1 majority), the West Virginia statutes imposing severance taxes on coal, including the additional tax on coal and the minimum severance tax on coal, W. Va. Code §§ 11-13A-3(a)-(b) [1997], 11-13A-6(a) [1997], and 11-12B-3(a) [2000], are unconstitutional, under the Federal Import-Export Clause, U.S. Const. art. I, § 10, cl. 2, as applied to coal severed and processed in this State and which immediately thereafter enters the "stream of export" to purchasers in foreign countries; these excise (business privilege) taxes, as applied in this context, constitute, "in operation and effect," "direct" "imposts" on sales of coal in foreign-export transit, which imposts are per se prohibited by the Federal Import-Export Clause as analyzed by Richfield Oil.

COAL SEVERANCE TAXES – OTA MUST FOLLOW UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT PRECEDENT(S) NOT EXPLICITLY OVERRULED -- The West Virginia Office of Tax Appeals -- and all other tribunals, judicial and quasi-judicial -- must follow precedent(s) of the Supreme Court of the United States that may appear to be no longer valid but which are not explicitly overruled by that Court, such as Richfield Oil Corp. v. State Board of Equalization, 320 U.S. 69, 91 L. Ed. 80, 67 S. Ct. 156 (1946), see United States v. International Business Machines Corp., 517 U.S. 843, 862, 135 L. Ed. 2d 124, 140, 116 S. Ct. 1793, 1804 (1996) (Thomas, J., writing for 6-2 majority) (dictum, that, under the Federal Import-Export Clause, "[t]he Court has never upheld a state tax assessed directly on goods in import or export transit[,] despite a different, more lenient type of analysis in more recent Import-Export Clause decisions of the highest Court; IBM is a Federal Export Clause case, U.S. Const. art. I, § 9, cl. 5, which imposes a broader prohibition against the Federal Congress than the Federal Import-Export Clause, U.S. Const. art. I, § 10, cl. 2, imposes against the states). Agostini v. Felton, 521 U.S. 203, 237, 138 L. Ed. 2d 391, 423, 117 S. Ct. 1997, 2017 (1997) ("[i]f a precedent of this Court has direct application in a case, yet appears to rest on reasons rejected in some other line of decisions, the [lower tribunals] should follow the case which directly controls, leaving to this Court the prerogative of overruling its own decisions.”).

FINAL DECISION

On January 29, 2002, and on another date not specified in the record, one of the Petitioners filed two amended tax returns claiming refunds of, respectively, $ for the calendar year 1998 and $ for the calendar year 1999, both for West Virginia coal severance taxes.* The purpose of filing these amended returns was to delete all coal sales in continuous transit to customers in foreign countries.

The Sales Tax Unit of the Internal Auditing Division (“the Division”) of the West Virginia State Tax Commissioner’s Office (“the Commissioner” or the “Respondent”), by a letter dated February 20, 2002, and by another letter whose date is not specified in the record, denied the entire amount of these two refund claims. The reason stated for the total denial of these claims was, essentially, that the Commissioner lacked the authority to declare a state tax statute to be unconstitutional, as requested by the Petitioner for coal sales to customers in foreign countries. This Petitioner received the refund claim denial letters on dates not specified in the record.

Thereafter, by mail, this Petitioner timely filed separate petitions for refund for each year, with the then reviewing entity, the Office of Hearings and Appeals.

* In this matter the term “coal severance taxes” refers to the basic coal severance tax, the “additional tax on coal,” and the “minimum tax” on severed coal. See W. Va. Code §§ 11-13A-1 et seq., as amended, called the “Severance and Business Privilege Tax Act of 1993,” especially §§ 11-13A-3(a)-(b) [1997] (imposing basic severance tax on coal) and § 11-13A-6(a) [1997] (imposing additional severance tax on coal), and W. Va. Code § 11-12B-1 et seq., as amended, especially § 11-12B-3(a) [2000] (imposing minimum severance tax on coal).

Similarly, on January 29, 2002, and on May 29, 2002, respectively, another Petitioner filed amended tax returns claiming refunds of, respectively, $ for the calendar year 1998 and $, for coal severance taxes. The purpose of the filing these amended returns was the same as stated above for the first Petitioner.

The Respondent's Division, by letters dated April 22, 2002, and June 03, 2002, respectively, denied the entire amount of these refund claims. Again, the reason stated for the total denial of these claims was, essentially, that the Commissioner lacked the authority to declare a state tax statute to be unconstitutional, as requested by the Petitioner for coal sales to customers in foreign countries. This Petitioner received the refund claim denial letters on dates not specified in the record.

Thereafter, by mail, this Petitioner timely filed a combined petition for refund (for all three years), totaling $, with the then reviewing entity, the Office of Hearings and Appeals.

Similarly, on May 30, 2002, another Petitioner filed amended tax returns claiming refunds totaling $ for the calendar years 1999, 2000, and 2001, for coal severance taxes. The purpose of filing these amended returns was the same as stated above for the first Petitioner.

The Respondent's Division, by a letter dated June 06, 2002, denied the entire amount of these refund claims, for the same reason stated above. This Petitioner received the refund claim denial letter on a date not specified in the record.

Thereafter, by mail, this Petitioner timely filed a combined petition for refund (for all three years), totaling $, with the then reviewing entity, the Office of Hearings and Appeals.

Subsequently, statutory notice of a hearing on the petitions was sent to each of the Petitioners and an agreed-to consolidated hearing was held in accordance with the provisions of W. Va. Code § 11-10-9, as then effective. Post-hearing memoranda of law were filed, and the consolidated matter was submitted on April 10, 2003, for decision by this tribunal, the West Virginia Office of Tax Appeals. See W. Va. Code §§ 11-10-9(b) [2002], 11-10A-1 [2002], 11-10A-3 [2002], and 11-10A-8(2) [2002].

FINDINGS OF FACT

The parties agree as to the material facts in this matter. They may be stated as follows.

1. During the tax refund periods in question, the Petitioners severed, processed, and sold coal from mines located in, as the case may be, Boone County, Kanawha County, or McDowell County, in West Virginia.
2. All of the coal sales at issue were for coal placed in continuous transit, either by (1) railway and, subsequently, by transfer to cargo ships from loading facilities near Norfolk, Virginia, or by (2) barge; and, in either situation, to customers located in foreign countries.
3. The entire export process from the loading of the coal on railroad cars or barges to the final delivery to the export customer was carefully coordinated before the coal was loaded and sold; thus, timing throughout this entire process was very important.
4. Unlike for sales of domestic coal, Petitioners have no control over the sales price for exported coal; instead, the price is established by the world market price of similar quality coal at the time of sale. Consequently, during the tax refund periods in question, the coal severance taxes could not be, and were not, added to the sales price of the exported coal or passed on in any way to the purchasers; instead, the Petitioners were essentially compelled, by world market competitive conditions, to absorb these taxes.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

1. Under the applicable statutes, see, e.g., W. Va. Code § 11-13A-3(a)-(b)[1997] (excise tax imposed "upon . . . privilege of . . . business of severing, extracting, reducing to possession and producing for sale, . . . [5%] of the gross value of the natural resource produced . . . , as shown by the gross income derived by the sale"), liability for the coal severance taxes accrued in this matter at the time of sale, which is after the coal had entered the continuous stream of export to foreign customers.
2. The West Virginia Office of Tax Appeals ("OTA"), as a part of the executive branch of state government, lacks the authority, under W. Va. Const. art. V, § 1, to declare a statute unconstitutional on its face; on the other hand, OTA does have the limited authority to declare a state tax statute unconstitutional as applied to the particular set of material facts involved in a given matter. See, e.g., Richardson v. Board of Dentistry, 913 S.W.2d 446 (Tenn. 1995) ("as applied" issue may also be raised for first time in courts on appeal). See generally M. Foy, The Authority of an Administrative Agency to Decide Constitutional Issues: Richardson v. Tennessee Board of Dentistry, 17 NAALJ 173 (Spring, 1997). Cf. syl. pt. 3, Cleveland Gear Co. v. Limbach, 35 Ohio St. 3d 229, 520 N.E.2d 188 (1988) (question of whether tax statute is unconstitutional as applied to a particular state of facts must be raised in notice of appeal to Board of Tax Appeals, and Board of tax Appeals must receive evidence concerning this question if presented, even though Board of tax Appeals may not declare the statute unconstitutional as applied).
3. Governed by the holding of the Supreme Court of the United States in Richfield Oil Corp. v. State Board of Equalization, 329 U.S. 69, 91 L. Ed. 80, 67 S. Ct. 156 (1946) (famously pro-taxpayer-oriented Douglas, J., writing for 7-1 majority), the West Virginia statutes imposing severance taxes on coal, including the additional tax on coal and the minimum severance tax on coal, W. Va. Code §§ 11-13A-3(a)-(b) [1997], 11-13A-6(a) [1997], and 11-12B-3(a) [2000], are unconstitutional, under the Federal Import-Export Clause, U.S. Const. art. I, § 10, cl. 2, as applied to coal severed and processed in this State and which immediately thereafter enters the "stream of export" to purchasers in foreign countries; these excise (business privilege) taxes, as applied in this context, constitute, "in operation and effect,"

"direct" "imposts" on sales of coal in foreign-export transit, which imposts are per se prohibited by the Federal Import-Export Clause as analyzed by Richfield Oil.

4. The West Virginia Office of Tax Appeals -- and all other tribunals, judicial and quasi-judicial -- must follow precedent(s) of the Supreme Court of the United States that may appear to be no longer valid but which are not explicitly overruled by that Court, such as Richfield Oil Corp. v. State Board of Equalization, 320 U.S. 69, 91 L. Ed. 80, 67 S. Ct. 156 (1946), see United States v. International Business Machines Corp., 517 U.S. 843, 862, 135 L. Ed. 2d 124, 140, 116 S. Ct. 1793, 1804 (1996) (Thomas, J., writing for 6-2 majority) (dictum, that, under the Federal Import-Export Clause, "[t]he Court has never upheld a state tax assessed directly on goods in import or export transit[.]" despite a different, more lenient type of analysis in more recent Import-Export Clause decisions of the highest Court; IBM is a Federal Export Clause case, U.S. Const. art. I, § 9, cl. 5, which imposes a broader prohibition against the Federal Congress than the Federal Import-Export Clause, U.S. Const. art. I, § 10, cl. 2, imposes against the states). Agostini v. Felton, 521 U.S. 203, 237, 138 L. Ed. 2d 391, 423, 117 S. Ct. 1997, 2017 (1997) ("[i]f a precedent of this Court has direct application in a case, yet appears to rest on reasons rejected in some other line of decisions, the [lower tribunals] should follow the case which directly controls, leaving to this Court the prerogative of overruling its own decisions.").
5. In a hearing before the West Virginia Office of Tax Appeals on a petition for refund, the burden of proof is upon a petitioner-taxpayer to show that it is entitled to the refund. See W. Va. Code § 11-10A 10(e) [2002].
6. In light of conclusions of law nos. 1, 3, and 4, the Petitioners taxpayers in this matter have carried the burden of proof concerning entitlement to the requested tax refunds.

DISPOSITION

WHEREFORE, it is the FINAL DECISION of the WEST VIRGINIA OFFICE OF TAX APPEALS that all of the petitions for refund, described above at the outset of this Final Decision, are hereby AUTHORIZED in toto.

As set forth in W. Va. Code § 11-10A-18 [2002], the West Virginia State Tax Commissioner's Office is to see that the payment of these refunds, including any statutory interest that may accrue, is issued promptly.
